Editorial

Being an Ineluctable Introduction Consisting of Material Provided by Editor Margaret C. Thompson

During the preparation of a feast of informational and entertaining delicacies destined for the esteemed consumers of this publication, it was a delight to provide readers a focus on Acme and its perpetrator, the highly regarded Chris Ware, a talented purveyor —

(Argh! Wait a minute! It's difficult to get out of the Acme mode.)

◎ We have an important request for everyone:

In But I Digress in CBG #1245, a humorous article was supplied by Editor Kevin Dooley: "If I Ever Become an Evil Overlord ..." It was preceded by the caution that original authors of items quoted on the Internet are difficult to track down.

Someone has subsequently supplied the information that the article is © 1996 by Peter Anspach. However, we still don't know how to locate him. Does anyone out there have an address, so that we can pay Anspach our reprint fee?

◎ If there is anything else in that But I Digress — or the one this issue — for which the originator can be determined, we'd appreciate the information.

◎ In two issues — in #1249, to be even more specific — we'll bring you a super-special king-size giant issue. Make room for it in your mailbox. If you get your copy from one of the industry's fine comics retailers, you might want to be sure to reserve your copy now. We think copies will go pretty fast, because there'll be no increase in price but lots of additional material.

I'll discuss the full story of its origin in that issue, but basically we wanted to make more editorial stuff available, especially a lot of the items we've received and edited but have been unable to use for lack of room.

◎ Judith Merril died Sept. 12 at the cardiac unit of Toronto General Hospital. She was born Jan. 21, 1923, and her first science-fiction story, "That Only a Mother" (Astounding, June 1948), caused a sensation at the time. Known best as an anthologist, her first was Shot in the Dark (1950), blurbed as "a different kind of mystery thrill" but actually containing science fiction and fantasy. I still recall the memorable room party my parents held at the Pittsburgh World SF Con in 1960. We sat there talking quietly, until Judy said things weren't exciting enough — would we mind, if she went out and brought some more attendees? She returned quickly, followed by a train of followers, including Isaac Asimov and Randy Garrett, holding high the just-won Hugo Award for Starship Troopers for Robert Heinlein, who accompanied the troop. She sure knew how to liven up a party.

Marvel, banks agree on debt settlement

By Michael Dean

Under pressure from stockholders and nearing the end of its debtor-in-possession financing, Marvel Entertainment told U.S. Bankruptcy Court Judge Helen Balick Sept. 16 that it has reached an agreement with lender banks that will settle Marvel's outstanding debt of more than $800 million.

Under the terms of the agreement, Marvel would pay Chase Manhattan Bank and other lender banks $385 million, as well as stock in Marvel's Panini SpA sticker company. The agreement is subject to the court's approval, and a hearing has been set for Oct. 9.

If approved by the court, the deal would make Carl Icahn Marvel's principal investor and would hand him the reins of Marvel's Chapter 11 reorganization process.

For their part, the banks will receive 62.5¢ on the dollar of their pre-Chapter 11 debt claims and 100% of their debtor-in-possession financing. They will also receive interest in Panini.

Reuters wire service reported the Sept. 16 hearing had been delayed five times while representatives of Marvel and lender banks worked out the details of a last-minute oral settlement.

The agreement puts a number of pending actions on hold, including a motion by the banks for the court to appoint a trustee to manage Marvel's assets and the announced intention of the equity committee of Marvel shareholders to support dismissal of Marvel's bankruptcy protection. The appointment of a trustee would have wrested control of Marvel's reorganization from Marvel's board of Icahn-appointed directors. The threatened action by the equity committee would have brought Marvel closer to Chapter 7 liquidation proceedings.

Still unresolved is Toy Biz' role in relation to a reorganized Marvel. Marvel had announced last month that negotiations for merging the two companies had stalled.

More than 5300 attend 1997 Canadian National Comic Book Expo

Show will expand to three days and move from August to June in 1998

By Janet L. Hetherington

More than 5300 people from both sides of the border poured into the Metro Toronto Convention Centre Aug. 23 and 24 for the third annual Canadian National Comic Book Expo. "It's the third year in a row that attendance has increased significantly, almost doubling," said Hobby Star Marketing Trade Show Co-ordinator Aman Gupta.

Organizers said they were so pleased with the show's turnout that they have expanded the Expo to three days next year. While the '98 show will return to the Toronto Convention Centre, the dates of the show will move from August to June 26, 27, and 28. "This way we're not conflicting with any other major comics conventions next year," Gupta said.

The 1997 Expo had 150 exhibitors' spaces and 67 artists in artists' alley. Guests included Carlos Pacheco, Marc Silvestri, and Bill Tucci. "Bill Tucci has already said, that if he's invited, he'll be back to the Expo," Gupta said.

Artists' alley was abuzz with activity with such small-press publishers as Tara Jenkins, Mark Oakley, and Bill Williams. "I found artists' alley and the corporate area with Chaos! Comics, Top Cow, TMP, and Crusade to be the best part of the show," said retailer Scott Hall, owner of The Comics Cave in Ottawa, who had driven to Toronto to look for bargains for his customers.

Retailers were also invited to a special industry networking night, sponsored by Diamond Comic Distributors, which featured a buffet served at Toronto's Hot House Cafe. "The evening was quite successful, and we will definitely be holding another one next year," Gupta said.

In addition, the Expo held a silent bid Charity Auction which raised more than $500 for the Sick Kids' Hospital in Toronto.

The guest list for next year's show will be released in February. For more information on the Expo call (416) 761-1760.

London Night and Kitchen Sink join forces for 'Razor/Crow: Kill the Pain'

London Night Studios and Kitchen Sink are teaming up for an early '98 crossover between The Crow and Razor.

The two-issue crossover is written by Everette Hartsoe and James O'Barr and illustrated by newcomer Albert Holaso. O'Barr will also contribute the cover paintings for this two-issue story — his first new Crow paintings in more than a year. The Crow and Razor share a lot in common. O'Barr produced Razor's second cover. The producers of The Crow movie, Jeff Most and Ed Pressman, are packaging Razor for TV and movie productions. Both characters have tragic pasts, which have helped feed their creations.

Hartsoe said that Kill the Pain will use scenes and names from his own past, in which his 12-year-old sister was murdered. That part of Hartsoe's life, he said, helped bring a character like Razor to life. O'Barr also lost a loved one, which helped in the creation of The Crow.

London Night will offer an incentive program for retailers. The two issues are scheduled to ship two weeks apart. A special edition will be shipped with every 15 copies ordered. According to London Night Head of Promotions Frederic Cooper, "Hopefully this will entice new retailers to give London Night a first or second look."

The crossover is also supported by other merchandise, such as T-shirts, posters, and card sets to commemorate the upcoming Crow 3 movie, written and directed by Rob Zombie.

Super-hero auction displays wares on videotape

The Toy Scouts Inc. Fourth Annual Super-Hero Collectibles Auction will close Friday, Oct. 10. This year's auction is rare in that, in addition to printing catalogs, Toy Scouts has chosen to display the items via videotape.

The video catalog, which can still be ordered for $10, shows each auction item from various angles and describes it. Accompanying the videotape is a printed, photoless catalog listing each item, its year, its manufacturer, its contition, and its estimated bid range.

Highlighting the auction are a Marx wind-up Marvel Super-Hero Express Train with box and a 1940 DC comic-book rack. Toy Scouts President Bill Bruegman said, "The Super-Hero Auction is a perennial favorite. In this auction, we are especially pleased to be offering a large Batman collection."

As always, Toy Scouts charges no buyer's premium, and all winning bidders will receive next year's Super-Hero Collectibles Auction Catalog free.

Anyone interested in participating in this year's auction or in having a video record of rare super-hero toys can order the video catalog by sending $10 to Toy Scouts Inc., 137 Casterton Ave., Akron, OH 44303 or by calling (330) 836-0668.

Smith writes comic book starring Jay and Silent Bob

'Clerks: The Comic Book' and other Smith mini-series are also upcoming from Oni Press

Chasing Amy Director Kevin Smith will bring his Jay and Silent Bob characters to comics in the first issue of a new monthly anthology title scheduled to begin in January and in a Clerks one-shot title tentatively scheduled for February or March. Smith himself will write the stories for both titles, which publisher Oni Press said will be followed by more one-shots and mini-series from Smith.

Oni Press announced it has reached an agreement with Producer Scott Mosier of Smith's View Askew Productions to publish a story featuring Jay and Silent Bob in a black-and-white monthly comic book called Oni Double Feature. Smith's story will be drawn by Matt Wagner .

Smith commented, "I've made it pretty clear to anybody that's bothered to listen: I love comics! And I'm very stoked at the prospect of applying my writing skills to the medium I feel most at home with. When Oni Co-Publisher Bob Schreck contacted us about exploring some licensing possibilities, we didn't hesitate one second. We hold him and Oni Co-Publisher Joe Nozemack in high regard and we were wondering where and when he was going to resurface since his departure from Dark Horse in December. Meanwhile, we just can't wait to see people's reaction to what we've got going on in Oni Double Feature and the upcoming Clerks one-shot."

Oni Double Feature #1 leads with "Walt Flannigan's Dog," a 15-page story featuring Jay and Silent Bob, which will be readers' first look at Smith's new work for the comics medium.

Schreck commented, "I think that the combination of Kevin, Matt Wagner, and Jay and Silent Bob in the premier issue of Oni Double Feature is gonna rock! Our intent is to work with Scott and Kevin at putting together fun and interesting projects based upon their cinematic creations. However, we are not going to burn out ourselves or our audience by churning out issue after issue in an effort to attain some delusional market-share status."

Plans are still in the works for Clerks: The Comic Book and other Smith-generated projects to be spread over the coming months. Clerks will be drawn by Jim Mahfood and will feature a cover by Gilbert Hernandez.

Nozemack said, "We are very excited to be working with Kevin, Scott, and the entire View Askew team. The characters that Kevin has created in his films have clearly hit a chord with today's younger moviegoing audiences, and we're certain that, with Kevin Smith at the helm of these new titles, our comic-book audience will react much the same way."

Both Clerks and Oni Double Feature will be 32-page, black-and-white titles. As its name implies, Oni Double Feature will offer a pair of stories each month. In addition to the Jay and Silent Bob story, the first issue will feature the first 15-page installment of a new, 30-page underground-style tale written and drawn by the Pander Bros. Rounding out this first issue is a new one-page Milk 'n' Cheese strip on the inside front cover. Each story will have its own cover, one by Matt Wagner and one on the reverse side by the Pander Bros.

Subsequent issues will feature stories ranging from a new Too Much Coffee Man vignette to new work by Bill Sienkiewicz.

Under a cover by Paul Pope, the second issue will conclude the Pander Bros.' "Secret Broadcast" and introduce the first of two 15-page installments of "Car Crash on the 405," a new autobiographical tale by Pope. The inside front cover will feature a Too Much Coffee Man strip written and drawn by Shannon Wheeler.

The third issue will have Pope's concluding chapter and the beginning of Troy Nixey's "Bacon." The cover to #3 is also by Troy, and the inside front cover will feature a one-pager by Judd Winick. Readers with cable might remember Winick from MTV's Real World shot in San Francisco. Judd has had a syndicated newspaper strip for the last several years, Frumpy The Clown.

Sienkiewicz is scheduled to contribute a new two-part story to be presented in #4 and #5.

Schreck and Nozemack launch Oni Press

Comics professionals Bob Schreck and Joe Nozemack announced the formation of comic-book publishing house Oni Press in July and spent much of the Comic-Con International: San Diego meeting with creators.

Nozemack said, "Both Bob and I have had a long-time desire to bring our talents into play to create a productive, profitable, and creative environment — a place within which comics professionals can create great stories, knowing that Bob and I will bring all our talents to bear in securing them the best possible audience."

"It is our intent to offer a high-quality, attractively packaged comic book designed to bring comics readers expertly crafted stories married to the finest artwork," Schreck said. "We will start with a modest line, beginning with two or three black-and-white, monthly comic books that will have a staggered launch beginning in the fall and winter of '97. We intend to keep our growth as slow and steady as possible. Most of the current comics publishers seem to have lost that keen eye for new talent and the enthusiasm it takes to successfully establish that talent."

No 'Sin City' on the big screen, but Wendy the Witch on video and Pittsburgh = Metropolis

MASS O' MEDIA
By Matt Brady

★ "Absolutely untrue." That's what Dark Horse's Diana Schutz said about persistent Internet rumors that a Sin City movie, animated or otherwise, is in the works. "While Frank Miller did write a Sin City screenplay at one point, he has absolutely no plans at the moment to make Sin City into a movie of any type. Fans of Frank should know that one of the main reasons that he works in the comics medium is because he has complete control over his projects — something he wouldn't have in Hollywood."

★ Harvey Entertainment and Saban Entertainment recently announced that they've agreed to co-produce a live-action, direct-to-video film featuring Casper and Wendy the Good Little Witch. The video should hit shelves in fall of 1998. Harvey officials stated that the project is partly due to consumers' strong response to this summer's Casper: A Spirited Beginning direct-to-video feature, as well as the need for entertainment properties for pre-teen girls.

★ Remember reading about a Jason vs. Freddy film project here a few weeks back? Turns out that the screenplay for the movie was written by none other than James (Starman) Robinson. "It was just a matter of being in the right place at the right time," Robinson said. "I'm friends with David Goyer, and I also had a spec script in, and the two just worked out, and I got the job." Don't look for The Shade to make a guest appearance.

★ Following up on his critical, if not commercial, success in George of the Jungle, Brendan Fraser has signed on for the leading role in Blast from the Past for New Line Cinema, according to The Hollywood Reporter. In the film, Fraser plays a man who was raised in a bomb shelter since the '60s, and emerges into the '90s.

For more Fraser action, check out George of the Jungle, hitting video stores Dec. 2.

★ Citing a crowded holiday theater schedule, Warner Brothers has decided to hold its underwater science-fiction thriller Sphere for a mid-February release. Based on Michael Crichton's book of the same name, the film was originally slated for a holiday release.

★ The director (Tim Burton) has been named, the star (Nicholas Cage) has been cast, and, now, the city has been selected. Warner Brothers recently announced that Pittsburgh will stand in as Metropolis when Superman Lives begins filming this fall. For those familiar with Pittsburgh, insiders are already pointing out the fact that downtown's PPG building looks a lot like a place Lex Luthor would call home.

★ Meanwhile, in Japan, The Princess Mononoke is shattering all national box-office records. The animated film by Hayao Miyazaki tells the story of a young girl raised by wolves, and is attracting both children and adults to theaters in record numbers, not seen since E.T. opened in Japan more than 12 years ago. Mononoke will be distributed globally by Walt Disney Studios beginning next March.

★ So what does Alan Moore have to do with the upcoming From Hell movie from New Line Cinema? Not much. "My involvement is fairly minor," Moore said. "It's still going ahead as far as I understand, but this is Hollywood we're talking about, so nothing is set in stone. I see the movie as a separate piece of work from the comic book. It may or may not be a good film, and there's nothing I can do about that. To me, the actual work is From Hell the comic book, and anything else is a separate piece of work."

★ In an odd twist of Hollywood politics and finances, Carolco Pictures Co-Founder Andy Vajna has formed a new company and has signed a $7.5 million sale agreement to buy a half-interest of the sequel rights to the Terminator franchise. According to The Hollywood Reporter, the remaining half share is held by a company controlled by Producer Gale Anne Hurd. The deal's not final just yet, and competitors can bid at an auction in October in Los Angeles bankruptcy court.

★ Universal Pictures has purchased the rights to British playwright Michael Cooney's Earth Dick, a science-fiction detective-noir story about a Philip Marlowe-type detective who has to travel off-planet to solve a case. At one time, the pitch held the interest of Dreamworks SKG, Paramount, and Mario Kassar's MK Productions.

★ Warner Brothers has announced that Tracy Scoggins will fill the newly created role of Captain Elizabeth Lochley on Babylon 5 when the fifth season of the series begins in January on TNT.

★ Grammy-winning composer Danny Elfman recently signed a multi-picture deal with Walt Disney Motion Picture Group, according to The Hollywood Reporter. Under the agreement, Elfman, famous for his scores for Batman and Edward Scissorhands among others, will write, direct, and produce films for the studio. The deal is non-exclusive when it comes to music, however — Elfman can continue scoring films for other studios while working on films for Disney.

★ Lost in Space and now — The Thunderbirds? According to The Hollywood Reporter, London's Working Title Films is in the process of putting together an in-house special effects company to provide effects for a live-action version of the 1960s UK series The Thunderbirds. The original series can still be seen on the Sci-Fi Channel.

While I don't have a copy of the letter in question before me (as published in CBG #1243) your editorial response about trading time for money as far as one's willingness to seek less expensive "sale" items, perhaps, of the same issue is certainly true. The thought that the cost of attending the San Diego Comic Con needs also to be factored into the relative costs and merits of putting myself into the role of "dealer" vis-à-vis my own status as collector is certainly true.

For that matter, I should also factor in the costs I might accrue driving around the San Francisco Bay Area in search of comics shops with good bargain bins or good sales. Yeah, I should. But I don't.

While all of your response certainly made sense in some economic manner, I realize that I never really sit and figure my gas and car-maintenance costs, hotel charges, and what-have-you when attending a convention, either. The reason is simple (other than it is an incredible bother): If I do factor in such costs, I must also add intrinsic values undeclared in these transactions.

One: I enjoy the search. For this collector, finding the good value is only part of the equation. The actual process of seeking out "strange new comics shops" (roll Bill Shatner's opening monologue here, please) is, indeed, part of my pleasure.

Two: Attending the San Diego Con is more than simply attending a dealers' room, because the entire gestalt of attending panel discussions, meeting new and old friends, or stumbling across entirely new comics-related items can't easily have a monetary value placed on it.

It's that human factor that throws simple financial values against the wall when it comes to comics collecting or any other hobby. God, it's just fun! Granted, I may, indeed, be trading time for money — but at least I feel that my time is being well spent, so long as I enjoy myself.

Just thought an added perspective could be tossed into the pot of this train of thought.

[Whoa! Block that metaphor!

You're absolutely right, of course, that conventions have much to offer in addition to chances to buy comics. It's simply that you were discussing comics buying at cons in economic terms — and I like to establish every so often that dealers who, for example, offer a variety of back issues at sometimes higher prices are not overcharging if they have to factor into their costs the economic realities of convention attendance.]

David Seidman
Marketing Director, Claypool Comics

Now hold it right there!

"[Adult-film actress] Hyapatia Lee certainly showed much more sartorial taste and decorum than, say, Elvira."

That comment came from Carnal Comics' Jay Allen Sanford in CBG #1245, and it's wrong.

It's wrong because Jay was talking about the women featured at the Comic-Con International: San Diego exhibitor booths last year. Elvira didn't appear at San Diego last year.

It's wrong because when Elvira did appear, in 1995, her "sartorial taste" meant her usual floor-length black gown. How were Ms. Lee's fringed buckskins more tasteful than that?

It's wrong because Elvira's "decorum" was impeccable: prompt and pleasant with the Claypool and convention staffers, articulate and responsive to the press, full of friendly banter for adult fans who found her sexy, and warm and patient with kids awed at meeting her in person. We loved having her at the Claypool booth.

So hold it right there, Jay! You can pick on anyone you like, but when you start tossing mud Elvira's way — well, them's fightin' words!

announce to all of your readers that the 30th World Mystery Convention, Bouchercon, will be held in Milwaukee Sept. 30 through Oct. 3, 1999. I know that this is two years in advance, but it is not too early to begin making plans.

Our guest of honor will be of interest to just about everyone. Max Allan Collins has been writing mysteries and producing comics-related work for 25 years. He has a long list of titles which are well worth reading, in particular the Nate Heller series, which started with the brilliant True Detective (the first of the Nitti trilogy) and runs through his latest, Damned in Paradise. These are among the finest, most thorough, and most entertaining historical mysteries ever written.

Al, of course, is also well known for his work on the Dick Tracy comic strip and his writing on Batman, as well as on the longest-running private-eye series in comic books, Ms. Tree.

The toastmaster for the convention is well-known mystery writer Parnell Hall, whose Stanley Hastings series is hilarious. Bouchercon '99 expects to draw 300 to 400 authors to Milwaukee. However, this is not a convention just for writers. We also expect to have an additional 1000 to 1500 fans in attendance. The four-day convention will consist of panels and other presentations, autographing sessions, a large book dealers' room, and an opportunity to meet with authors, editors, publishers, and other fans and it will conclude with an awards brunch Sunday, Oct. 3. The convention itself will be held in the newly remodeled and expanded downtown Milwaukee Hilton Hotel, directly across the street (and connected by skywalk) to the new convention center, as well as shops and restaurants.

Registration through Dec. 31, 1997, is $95. After that time it will go up to $115 through the end of 1998 and $135 through the time of the convention.

For further information or to obtain a registration form, write to Bouchercon '99 at the address above.

After some consideration on my part, I have decided that episode #200 of my strip Cow-Boy will be the last. I wanted to thank you and everyone involved with CBG for running my strip. I feel that I have made dramatic improvements in my writing and art in the last five years. This would not have occurred if not for the forum for my work that CBG presented. For this I am very grateful. Unfortunately, demands on my time by my research and a desire to work on stories not constricted by the four-panel format have made ending the strip the most logical decision.

[Hey, folks, don't miss Jay's comic-book version of Cow-Boy*. It does* not consist of strip reprints; it's "stories not constricted by the four-panel format."]

Nat Gertler

I suspect that people who know me well saw B. Louis Reinke/Louis Bright-Raven's letter in CBG #1243 and just knew I'd have to respond. After all, I'm a stickler for proper use of math, and, even as he was apologizing for past math errors, Reinke was perpetrating new ones.

In a discussion about the average number of titles a comics writer writes, Reinke takes the number of issues and number of authors published by four major publishers for each of six months. He then averages the numbers and figures that ,on the average month, 85 writers wrote 135 titles. He implies from this that the average comics writer writes 1.5 issues. Tossing aside the issue of sampling methodology (i.e., that some of those folks writing for the Big Four are also writing for smaller companies and that there are plenty of comics writers who are not writing for those four companies), there is a severe problem of numerical processing. It has to do with the fact that writers who don't have a comic book coming out in a given month aren't counted at all. As a comic-book writer, I can tell you that some months I have several comics out, and other months I have none.

To provide a simple numeric example, let's say that there are 150 active comics writers. Of these, 50 write two comic books per month, 50 write one comic book per month in even-numbered months. The remaining 50 write one comic per month in odd-numbered months. As such, on any given month, there are 150 comics, with 100 writers represented. Using Reinke's system, we'd find that the "average" comic book writer was writing 1.5 issues per month, when, in actuality, on average, a comic-book writer wrote one comic book per month. (Perhaps more significantly to the points he was making, the "typical" comic-book writer, the one right in the middle of the quantity list, writes half a comic book per month.)

He then makes some claim about Tom Clancy and other successful authors not "whipping out" 200 pages per month. Some of Clancy's recent books run well over 1000 pages, and that's in addition to his other work. It's hard to create an exact measurement, as some of his books are co-written, but it's certainly not out of range to suggest he may be turning out 100 pages per month, about the same number of pages as someone who is writing four standard comics per month. Some popular authors (such as Stephen King, as Maggie notes) are more prolific.

He then returns to his statements about housing, ignoring that his previous claims about writers needing to live in New York or California are groundless. (If he took a look at a list of successful or prolific comic authors, he'd find addresses in Minnesota, in Washington, in other countries.) He then invokes his own samples of rents in New York and California, two sizable states with a large range of areas, including ones where the rents are much lower than the ones he cites. When he notes "even my relatives who live in Van Nuys pay $1350," he's making it sound as though Van Nuys is some sort of undesirable and cheap area. Actually, Van Nuys is in Los Angeles County, is a short drive from the city itself, and is far from cheap. Even within Los Angeles County, here are some real rents, taken from current ads: a large two-bedroom house, $725. A two-bedroom apartment, $525. A three-bedroom condo, $850.

Numbers can be tricky beasts. Before one starts throwing numbers around, one should have the right numbers and know how to use them.

Since the Oh, So? column is regularly littered with doom-sayers bemoaning the state of comics' fluctuating sales, character modifications, and other traits over which fate and others hold control, the time-tested adage "actions speak louder than words" comes to my mind. I have no care as to which cola or comic book outsells another. If I did want to change the world of past or present comic-book sales, I would take action where it may do some good. Spread the word. Advertise. Donate comics to elementary schools. Hand out back issues on holidays. Leave stacks of well-worn favorites in doctor's-office waiting rooms.

Sure, another whining letter to CBG is always welcome. Too bad you would not find this great publication being read by one of the millions of illiterate people the world over. Perhaps a donation of time, money, or material to a wonderful organization such as Literacy Volunteers of America would, in time, increase sales and interest in comics, as more folks discover the precious gifts reading and comprehension holds for them.

Charities depend upon our support for their existence. If I felt very strongly about comics readership, I might devote a percentage of my spendable income to acquiring a stack of comics from the 25¢ box each time I visited my favorite comics dealer, only to "accidentally" leave copies on park benches, school yards, and near baseball fields. If I cared at all about the future of the epitome of American art culture, I might spend time reading comics to convalescing patients in health-care centers.

Ah, yes, if I cared. If I cared about comics all that much, I would set goals to improve things. Plant the seeds. Harvest the crop. Learn to be generous. I will keep my eyes open for future Oh, So? letters where someone organized a reading time with other parents in their area that resulted in a child becoming a comic-book fan.

I may have to wait some time for one of you to earn a college degree and make another title or super-hero a household word. This I look forward to. Perhaps there are other fans who share my opinions and have practical suggestions to share on how to save the comics world. I can't wait to read a letter like that! Surely, I cannot be the only reader who saw store after store close and was not surprised. A lot of those stores were owned or staffed by folks who admitted to me they had never read a comic book in their life. They might still be in business, if they had stuck to newspapers, smokes, lottery tickets, and a token spin rack of comics near a shelf of sport cards.

Me, I work in a warehouse and I do not care where other people work. We are all responsible for our own life, pretty much free to do as we please. Seems a lot of folks are concerned with things and people they have never met, while others in their own towns need food, warm clothes, some human contact, and, of course, comic books. Why should I care about the state of a multi-million-dollar corporation? My hands are full with a job, my lovely wife and our two beautiful rabbits, paying the bills, and, of course, comic books.

Thanks to CBG staff for showing they care by offering us the best publication in the hobby week after week. Grateful thanks also the wonderful free classified ads which have allowed me to make friends across the country and swap back issues with readers who simply love the art form and like to actually read the comics they receive. And hats off to those CBG dealers who, month after month, receive my phone orders because of the discounted prices offered that I can afford to pay.

[Hey, folks: Halloween is coming again. Have you checked those 25¢ boxes for comics to give neighborhood children? (Make sure they're appropriate for younger readers, of course.) Have you asked your retailer whether you could buy in bulk for the occasion?

Retailers: Have you culled your "remaindered" backstock for comics you could bag in bulk for Halloween sales?]

I truly agree that there must be changes in comic books, as in reality. Yet that does not mean to go stark raving mad. Superman got his rebirth in 1986 (granted, I accepted some of the changes), but now that Superman is changed again in 1997, I think Superman should have remained dead. (Sad to say, but true.)

How many Justice Society members are there still surviving? I, indeed, miss the JSA/JLA team-ups and Earth-2. But why not bring back Earth-2, at least for old times' sake, even Superhorse?

Finally, when will we ever find out where the original Superman went to after Crisis. (Is he dead or what?) This has been bothering me since 1985. Perhaps the original Supes could be brought back and — never mind, probably not.

[Even as fans analyze the changes the years have brought to their favorite characters, they can check out DC's new Tangent concept. Multiple Earths have crept back into the DC universe — more quietly, perhaps, with a twist, perhaps — but they're back. And if Green Lantern can wander through graveyards, returning the dead to life for one last fling, can Earth-2 be far behind?

It's fine with me, I hasten to add.]

I just got the newest CBG this weekend and I wish to thank you for aiding in this quest to unearth one of many "Rosetta Stones" that will help to unravel many details of how the comics business evolved in this country. The color reproduction of the six known Circulation magazines on Page 56 of CBG #1242 look stunning. The page gave me goose bumps.

As you well know, upon viewing the six issues I have uncovered after several years of looking at the delightful Comics Fandom Reunion party Bill Schelly hosted at this year's Chicago Comicon (this has to be turned into an annual event, Bill), the potential wealth of comics history waiting to be found almost boggles the minds of comics scholars fortunate to have seen even one copy, let alone the estimated minimum of 200+ issues still languishing somewhere on this continent on some lonely, forgotten back shelf.

Every newspaper editor and publisher whom King Features could count as a potential customer received a free subscription to this Diamond Dialog of its day. The card catalog file of the main branch of the New York Public Library says it had a bound set as of 1935. When people like Bill Blackbeard of the venerable San Francisco Academy of Comic Art tried to check out the set back in the 1960s, the run was nowhere to be found. It has been missing for more than 30 years. Even the Hearst Corporation, doing business as the Star Syndicate, then King Features Syndicate, didn't bother to maintain a set for its own archives.

I found my first copy at a small comics convention held at San Francisco's Cow Palace in 1994. I was dumbfounded by what I saw inside. The photo used in my Platinum Age article in this year's Overstreet Price Guide of the line to get into a 1923 comicon in Toronto came from that copy.

Another copy came my way from longtime comics enthusiast Dr. Jeffery Rapp Jr. (Fremont, Neb.), when he found it listed in Krause's Toy Shop for less than $25. He had seen my (then) one lonely copy and was astounded to find one

Brian Walker (curator of the Museum of Comic Art before it moved into its new digs in Florida) and Bill Blackbeard each have two copies. Each of us now has color photocopies of these six known copies. There have to be more out there. I am holding off completing my 100-year history of the comics business, Comic Book Store Wars, hoping that more copies turn up so the wealth of invaluable information may be shared with all of comics fandom.

I am beseeching every member of comics fandom who loves the rich history of this medium to search his or her local city and university libraries, as well as ask local newspaper morgues if even one copy exists within their archives of American popular culture. Take the page of color cover repros with you and show it to "old-timers" at these possible resting places of one of the most important venues of comics knowledge in an effort to jog their memories. Ask who the editors and/or publishers were during that time span (1916-1933) when Circulation was being published to see whether their personal papers were deposited at the local college or university. Maybe you you can find out where their alma mater is and inquire there. Your unborn grandchildren will thank you.

There is also the possibility that other comics syndicates besides King Features put out their own propaganda magazines. If you do take it upon yourself to help uncover the whereabouts of the legendary Circulation magazine, try looking for other possible publications from Tribune Media Services, NEA, New York Herald, United Feature, New York World, McNaught, New York Post, Publishers, and a host of other early comics venues.

Jim Johnson

To anyone familiar with comicdom's often-overlooked small press, the name of self-publisher and writer/artist Mike Pascale should be known. If not, people may be more likely to recognize the oversized noggin and bulging belly of his self-created character, Bru-Hed, America's Favorite Blockhead. If people are still scratching their own noggins, then it's a safe bet that they have missed the latest Bru-Hed title, a one-shot entitled Bru-Hed's Guide to Gettin' Girls Now! from Schism Comics.

For those who don't know, Bru-Hed the character is representative of every drunken, sexist, racist, selfish, and politically incorrect blowhard that most everyone has encountered at one time or another. He's a short, cantankerous fellow, with a hat size of 80 or so, who enjoys the fine taste and aroma of cheap beer. Lots of cheap beer. He ogles women, harasses hitchhikers, pigs out in front of the TV, and is a general pain in the rear to most everyone. Bru-Hed speaks his mind to most anyone who rubs him the wrong way and usually gets what's coming to him in return. Bru-Hed the comic book is a satirical take on large corporations, feminists, religious zealots, and anyone else Pascale feels like taking a poke at. Pascale published the first Bru-Hed comic book, another one-shot, about four years ago. He followed it with a four issue mini-series that ended last year. Bru-Hed's Guide to Gettin' Girls Now!, released in July, is the latest Bru-Hed title.

Not only is Pascale the president of Schism Comics, but he's also a friend. A very good friend of mine, at that. And I don't normally call him Pascale. I usually call him a lot worse. I've worked for Mike for the past few years, since right after he published the first Bru-Hed one-shot. He's called me his Marketing Director, his Promotions Manager, and his Art Assistant, but I think bestows those titles upon me in order to cheer me up while I'm carrying his luggage, washing his car, or shining his shoes.

One of the best perks of working for Mike is the opportunity to attend major conventions and trade shows. At these functions, I basically help Mike set up the booth displays, take down the booth displays, and try to look pretty sitting behind the table during the days in between so I won't scare away potential customers. And I've never seen any other publishers who could set up a booth with nothing more than a roll of duct tape, a few coat hangers, and some Velcro.

Since I started working for him, I've seen his recognition factor at these shows grow from year to year. A small but loyal and ever-growing number of people who wander by the table recognize Bru-Hed on the booth's displays. At times, there's a downright mob at the table, with people commenting on how the character looks like their Uncle Bob or how ingeniously funny the character looks or maybe even laughing at the story as they page through the copies for sale. From behind the table, it seems as though that everyone loves Bru-Hed.

The sad thing is, everyone might love it, but not everyone buys it. While sales at the actual conventions aren't bad, they're far from phenomenal through comics shops. Not that this in itself is surprising; not many small-press comics are phenomenal sellers, and comics sales have dropped considerably across the board in recent years. As any self-publisher knows, it is the small press that is hit the hardest during lean times.

What is surprising, to me at least, is that after four years, Mike's work has still gone unnoticed by fandom at large. And that's a shame — not because he isn't making enough money, but because he is a highly talented creator and the public is missing out on a truly fine piece of work. Thus, I take fingertips to keyboard and attempt to call attention to an overlooked talent. Promotions Manager I may be, but I don't say these things because I'm an employee of Schism Comics or even because I'm a friend of Mike. I say it because I'm a fan of Bru-Hed.

The mini-series, as well as the first one-shot, were well done, funny comics. The art is nicely done and very detailed. Mike's artistic talent is far above some popular mainstream artists. The humor ranges from slapstick to subtle background gags. And illustrator Dean Armstrong has created stunning airbrushed masterpieces for each and every cover.

But it is Mike's latest effort that is undoubtedly his best to date. Bru-Hed's Guide to Gettin' Girls Now! is positively one of the funniest comic books I have ever read. As the title suggests, it focuses on Bru's misguided and hilarious attempts at picking up women. Any guy who's ever had a drink splashed in his face will be able to instantly relate, as will any woman who's done the splashing. The format is different from previous Bru-Hed comics, since this issue is filled mostly with one-page strips rather than an actual 20-something page storyline.

Oh, So?

The comic book is a satire on stereotypical male-chauvinist attitudes and is blunt and direct about it. I highly recommend it to anyone who likes a good laugh and who can take a joke about such things. It's not ideal for children, more because the humor would be lost to the pre-dating crowd than for any other reason. Of course, everyone knows that what Junior reads is ultimately up to Mom and Dad to decide, yes?

What initially amazed me about the character Bru-Hed was how such a nice, well-mannered guy like Mike could come up with such a creation. I can honestly say that Mike is the nicest guy I know. Bru-Hed is, well, not so nice, but he sure is fun to laugh at — kind of like the characters in Seinfeld. And the Bru-Hed trade paperback, which reprints the first one-shot and mini-series, should be out any day now, as well.

There. With the shameless plug now also out of the way, I can mention the following, not as a fan or an employee of Schism, but as a friend: Mike Pascale is one helluva guy. He's been a great friend these past years, during good times and bad. He stood up as my Best Man at my wedding two years ago and threw me one incredible bachelor party. Or so I'm told; I can't remember it. And when I had to return home from San Diego just prior to the start of this year's Comic-Con International due to a family emergency, Mike was very understanding, even though I was leaving him in a major bind. So I want to say publicly: Thanks, man. For everything. A guy could never ask for a better friend.

Hey, with me gone, who shined your shoes, anyway?

I am a fan of the Warner Bros. cartoons, mostly Looney Tunes, Tiny Toon Adventures, and Animaniacs.

I like the Animaniacs TV show that airs on Kids' WB as well as the DC comic book. One of my favorite characters is Slappy Squirrel, a retired cartoon star living with her nephew, Skippy. Slappy even tries to foil her arch enemies Walter Wolf, Sid the Squid, Beanie the Bison, Doug the Dog, and Stinkbomb the Dog.

On the Animaniacs TV cartoons, Slappy Squirrel's voice is portrayed by Sherri Stoner, who also produced many Animaniacs cartoons, while Skippy's voice is portrayed by Nathan Rugger, the son of Animaniacs creator Tom Rugger. I know Slappy Squirrel had her own half-hour Animaniacs episode titled "One Flew over the Cuckoo Clock" recently, but it's doubtful Slappy would get her own cartoon series spun-off from Animaniacs like Pinky and The Brain did. And it's very doubtful that there would be plush dolls of Slappy and Skippy Squirrel (even though other Animaniacs characters Yakko, Wakko, Dot, Pinky, and The Brain have been made into plush dolls).

Though none have been released yet, I wish this would happen soon. (How come they never made Tiny Toon characters Shirley the Loon and Fifi La Fume in plush-doll form?)

As I quote from Slappy, "Now that's comedy!"

A lot has been written lately about the quality of today's comics. Many people have expressed the opinion that there is a great amount of quality work out in this day and age. The drawback, however, is the price.

I tend to agree and am in a position to pay higher prices for a comic book, because I am professionally employed and make a good salary. If I were in college or just starting out in the work force, it would be a different question. Recently, two comics were presented to me to read and both were the same — what I would consider high — price ($2+), yet both were worlds apart in quality.

The first was P. Craig Russell's Elric and the second was Rob Liefeld's Fighting American. The purpose of this letter is not to downplay anyone, but I read these two comic books on the same day, and the contrast was just incredible. I have been reading comics from the late '50s, so I know a good comic book from a bad one, and Fighting American had it all going downhill. The comic book may have been geared to a younger audience, but when I go to my comics store I see many, many 30+ male readers buying Liefeld's comics. The dialogue was — to say "childish" is to be kind. The art was incredibly flat, though the section with Steve Platt was nice. The Liefeld art was terrible.

I read the comic book in literally five minutes — this due to the fact that the last 10 pages or so were one-panel-per-page "pin-ups." I would never write just to say how awful a comic book is, but then I picked up P. Craig Russell's Elric and was astounded at what a beautiful comic book this was. For one thing, there was a well-told story. It had a beginning and an end and the plot elements flowed smoothly. The story was told in a logical progression with one page even having 14 panels. The art and layout were some of the most beautiful I have ever seen in a comic book, and the coloring by Digital Chameleon was lush and beautiful. This comic book (actually mini-series, since there are seven parts) should be used as an example of what an excellent comic book looks like.

Let me say I like Liefeld's art. With a good inker he can do fine work. Why comics like Fighting American hit the stands in this way is a mystery to me. I urge all fans of quality comics to pick up Russell's Elric. You will not be disappointed.

[Goethe's three principles of criticism are:
What was the creator trying to do?
How well did he succeed?
Was it worth doing?

I have a deep suspicion that Russell and Liefeld were trying to do very different things within the wider spectrum of sequential graphic art. Despite the people you see reading both, I suspect the creators are aiming at very different audiences which are looking for very different types of storytelling.]

On a film or TV show, the three big behind-the-camera job descriptions are those of writer, director, and producer. Even though some folks will juggle two — or even all three — of those titles at the same time, they are pretty much separate, distinct jobs.

Which is the most important? Well, it depends on who you ask. Usually, if you ask a producer, he'll tell you it's the producer. He's the boss, he's the one who hires everyone, he has the money. He may or may not have put up all or any of the bucks, but he usually holds the major responsibility to see that they're properly spent.

Ask a director and he'll tell you that he's the one who makes the film. He's the one who binds the many disparate elements into one unified piece of work. The writer will argue, instead, that he had the vision, he conceived the whole thing, and that all others are merely following his blueprint.

All three are right and all three are wrong. Truth is: Everyone participates and, depending on the individual power structure of a project, anyone can be the 3000-lb. gorilla. Lately, directors seem to dominate in movies, and producers in television. Writers can dominate in either area, though usually by becoming hyphenates — i.e., writer-producer, writer-director.

These are generalizations and there are exceptions aplenty. There are movies where the screenwriter (Neil Simon, to name one) outranked everyone without becoming a producer and others where the cinematographer and/or film editor had a lot more to do with what got on the screen than the director. Some producers have maintained more control than their directors are willing to admit. (We are speaking here, by the way, of producers who actually produce. In a minute, we'll speak of producers who do bupkiss and who receive the title as an honorific.)

A friend of mine who recently worked on a high-visibility motion picture told me — and I believe him — "Everything that made it into the final cut was the way the producer wanted it. If the producer and the director disagreed, the producer got his way, every time. And all the action stuff was shot by the second-unit director, and all the effects stuff by the effects crew. The director was involved in none of that, very little of the editing, none of the music scoring or post-production. He didn't even see the finished film until the producer declared it done.

"But the trade-off for that was that the director was allowed to act like he made the film, to go on Entertainment Tonight and discuss how he had realized his vision. They let him do that because, one, it's good publicity and box office and, two, you almost have to let directors do that these days.

"If you're a motion picture producer in today's Hollywood, you can get paid a fortune and you can sometimes even control the product. But you have to be willing to let others take the bows." From my observation, this is correct.

And we haven't even addressed the fact that, on many a TV show or movie, no one — but no one — has even a fraction of the power of the star. No one makes any decisions on a Sylvester Stallone or Arnold Schwarzenegger movie unless Sly or Arnold allow them to make those decisions.

And on a TV show, it's worse. If you were hired to produce Cosby and you had a difference of opinion with Bill, guess who would win. If you were directing The Nanny and you found you couldn't deal with Fran, guess which of you would be fired. Stars, especially around a hit, have more power than anyone.

But this article is not about stars. It's about writers, directors, and — especially — producers. Before I talk more about them, I'd like to discuss how one goes about getting a screen credit in one of those categories — and how one goes about not getting a screen credit when one wishes to disassociate oneself from a project. The rules vary, depending on your occupation.

The Directors Guild of America, for example, insists that, but for the rare exception, one and only one name come after the words, "Directed by..." One director is hired and that person finishes the film and receives the credit, unless he or she is officially replaced, as per a carefully defined procedure.

Should the resultant film or TV show be something the director wishes to disown, he or she can remove the real name and substitute the official DGA pseudonym, which is Alan Smithee. When you see Mr. Smithee's name on the screen, brace yourself for a bow-wow. (There's a new movie due out soon — a comedy about the redoubtable Alan Smithee. In a move so dripping with symbolism you wonder if they planned it, the man who directed this new movie is unhappy with how it came out and is removing his name from it. So it will be listed as directed by — who else? — Alan Smithee.)

Writers' credits are, natch, the exclusive province of the Writers Guild of America, which has a harder job of it. Films usually have one director but they often have many writers — and everyone on the production who makes the teensiest suggestion seems to feel they are entitled to have their name up there after "Written by ..."

To settle these matters with some nugget of sanity, the guild has a credits manual that goes on for a great many pages, specifying what one must have contributed to warrant credit. Since so much of it is subjective, there is an arbitration committee that rules on such matters. And, since writers have been known to sue when they aren't awarded the credit they think they deserve, the guild has a whole legal staff to defend its rulings. So far, they have won every challenge.

The Guild has absolute jurisdiction over this, and it's a good thing. A lot of times, non-writers try to wheedle a writer credit, regardless of their actual contribution. Just last month, a movie studio was attempting to option a comic-book property for a possible movie with a possible screenplay by me. The gent who owns the property didn't create it and has no intention of actually writing all or any of the screenplay.

Still, as a condition of the sale, he was demanding that he receive at least co-credit as the writer of the movie. The studio had to explain to him, in the tone of voice you'd use on a toddler, that it cannot guarantee that. It can promise him tons of money and certain other credits and perks — but the WGA has the final say on who gets listed as the screenwriter(s). The rights holder still does not believe this.

When a writer wants his or her name off a show, it works like this: Each writer is allowed to register up to three pseudonyms with the Guild. Should I opt to distance myself from a show I've written — a three-time occurrence to date — I can withhold my real name and substitute one of my aliases. Mine are tame, by the way. Some writers favor names that tell the world their script has been despoiled — names like "Noah Ward" or "Jerry Rigg." One writing team I know sign their debacles "Bert and Harry Karamazov."

The reason the bogus names are registered is this: Over the years, the Guild collects residuals and other fees for the writers. Years from now, if moola trickles in for a show written by "Cordwainer Bird," the WGA folks can go to their files, look up that name, and see that this money should be forwarded to Harlan Ellison. (I tried registering "William Goldman" as one of my pseudonyms, but they wouldn't let me ...)

So that's how you get your name on (or off) a film or TV show as a writer or director: The Writers Guild has to be convinced you're really the writer — the Directors Guild has to decide you're really the director.

Now, what about the producer? Well, I regret that I am unable to give you the rules for how you earn a producer credit. And there's a very good reason why I can't give you those rules.

There aren't any.

That's right: no rules, save those of custom, govern the producer credit. The guy who runs the studio can literally put his cocker spaniel's name down as the producer. That fellow who owns that comic-book property I just mentioned can be given, and will probably wind up with, the title of producer or executive producer or something with the word "producer" in it.

You can even make up a producer. For most of the Jay Ward cartoons, like Rocky and Bullwinkle, Jay and his fellow (real) producer, Bill Scott, invented the non-existent E. Ponsoby Britt and gave him screen credit as executive producer. They intended it as an inside joke, but people would call the studio and become irate when they were told they couldn't talk to Mr. Britt. Bill even had folks try to impress him with their importance by telling him what close friends they were with ol' Ponsoby. (One referred to him as "Ponce.")

This applies to the many different levels of producer: executive producer, supervising producer, studio producer, segment producer, supervising segment producer, co-producer, consulting producer.

You can even have multiples. On one show I worked on, we had two executive producers, four producers, two supervising producers, one supervising segment producer, a raft of segment producers, a studio producer, and I don't know how many more. Plus, along with them, there was a whole layer of associate producers, associate segment producers, associate studio

Mass o' Media Movie News

★ Along with House of Frankenstein coming in November, NBC is gearing up to produce a two-hour version of Aldous Huxley's Brave New World. No word yet on casting or when you can expect to see it on the tube.

★ Looks like Harrison Ford's new movie, The Age of Aquarius, won't film in Israel. According to Variety, producers have pulled the plug on filming in the troubled country, due to the latest rash of suicide bombings and the fact that no insurance company was willing to write a policy that covered losses due to war.

★ We may get a chance to find out whether the lambs are still crying. It looks as though Anthony Hopkins and original Silence of the Lambs Director Jonathan Demme are in talks about a sequel to the 1991 thriller. The only holdup, according to Variety, is Thomas Harris, the author of the original book, who has yet to turn in the galleys for the sequel. Once the galleys are in, and if the project gets approved from there, expect this one to be fast-tracked for a near-future release.

Point of View

producers, etc. It was the only show in TV history to have more producers than viewers.

At one point when they were about to issue a new staff list, I made some alterations, making certain that everyone had the word "producer" in their title...like the custodian became the janitorial producer, and the bookkeeper became the accounting producer. We had a guy we used to send out to get pizza at lunch, and he was promoted to supervising pepperoni producer.

My titles made as much sense as any of them did. One might suppose that the various producer titles — the real ones, not my parodies — denoted the chain of command or that they corresponded to what all those people did on the show. And if one supposed that, one would be wrong. I've worked on shows where the producer wanted more money so, as a compromise, they made him executive producer without changing his salary or job description. Nothing changed but his credit.

That is, in fact, how most of them are assigned — in negotiation. The multiplicity of producer credits is largely because it doesn't cost the studio anything to dispense them. When a story editor is demanding a thousand-dollar raise, it's a lot cheaper for the studio to say, "How about $500 and a producer credit?"

Thus, producer titles have become functionally meaningless. Once, if you wanted to know who had the final creative say on a show — who it was who OK'd the script, approved the casting, made whatever decisions had to be made, it was easy: It was the producer. But now, everyone's the producer and they aren't all in charge.

So in the last few years, a new term has recently come into vogue to specify the person with (theoretically) the final say on creative matters. That title is "show runner."

It never, to my knowledge, appears on any screen. Folks are still called producers — or some permutation thereof — or directors or writers or story editors. But parenthetically, it's common knowledge on every show that one of those individuals is the show runner. A producer, if he's the show runner, may outrank the executive producer on certain matters. A show runner can outrank everyone except for a star who can have him or her fired.

(To further confuse the issue: I have occasional been the "show runner" on animated programs where my title was "story editor" but I outranked the guy with the producer title. The folks who put up the money for any project generally have the ultimate authority and, if they wish, they can decree that everyone takes orders from the caterer.)

The great composer Stephen Sondheim once said, "The most important thing is to make certain that everyone's doing the same show." He was talking about Broadway stage productions, but it applies to every TV program, movie, play, comic book — any time two or more people collaborate on anything.

You all have to be doing the same show — and the show runner is the one who knows what that show is, or at least should know. Once upon a time, this would have been the producer — but, as I said, these days, everyone's the producer — even, at times, someone as unlikely as me.

I consider myself a writer — this, despite the fact that I occasionally do shows where they slap a producer title before my name. The first time I was in such a position, I made one of the stupidest mistakes imaginable. In the increasingly unlikely event you have any vestige of respect left for me, you won't after next week's column when I tell about that screw-up.

I'll give you a hint what it was: Mel Brooks made a picture called Silent Movie, which was a silent movie all about the making of, yes, a silent movie. At one point, they've shot the feature and they're about to premiere it, when someone rushes up to Mel and tells him the film is missing. Mel grasps the sides of his head and shrieks — in silent — "My God! That was the only copy!" That's kinda the situation I found myself in, the first time I co-produced a TV show. That pathetic tale, next time.

For now, I'm Mark Evanier, my mailing address is 363 S. Fairfax Ave., #303, Los Angeles, CA 90036, and I get e-mail at evanier@ix.netcom.com. Write now. After next week, you won't want to associate with me.

• The Slings & Arrows Comic Guide (1997, Aurum Press Ltd., softcover, ISBN 1-85410-486-1, $29.95) is subtitled "A Critical Assessment of Over 2500 Titles" and is edited by Frank Plowright.

The back cover copy says this British production is the first critical reference guide to collectible comics, it contains reviews and analyses of almost 3000 titles "from the 1930s to date," covers "the full range of American comics, from A1 to Zot!," covers recommendations and notes on collections, and cross-references creators.

There are unusual insights in the volume. Here are partial excerpts on series that are still running:

Deadbeats (Claypool) "It's ironic that this eerie and horrific merger of grand opera and soap opera also presents virtually the only cool and sane Christians ever seen in comics! Sexy, spooky and able to keep the reader genuinely off balance and disturbed."

Strangehaven (Abiogenesis) "It reads like a cross between Twin Peaks and The Prisoner, written by someone on Valium ... heavy on detail, with very little attempt to distinguish foreground from background via the inking, and stiff with photo-referencing."

Gay Comics (Bob Ross) "Too many issues seem to have earnest but dull contributions, or more of the same old jokes about gay life. [Editor Andy] Mangels has attempted to address this with the themed or single-contributor issues and, to be fair, there is something in each issue to make it worth reading."

Generation X (Marvel) "By and large ... remains the best of the X-Men line due to consistent scripting and great art and by concentrating on a small, well-developed cast."

Preacher (DC/Vertigo) "What astonishes is the continuing capability of Ennis and Dillon to shock and surprise on a monthly basis."

It's a bit out of date, a problem with any book involving recent facts, be it price guide or history. The Ninjak entry, for example, takes no note of the character's return. The book does provide coverage of some older comics — though there's no attempt to be complete. (There's a discussion of Jack Cole's version, but the only Plastic Man items reviewed are those from DC.) Though many reviews are positive, negative evaluations abound, too. Pulling some from items found only in back-issue boxes:

Donna Matrix (Reactor) "With all the editorial bluster about the advantages of computer graphics the folk at Reactor forgot a story's also desirable. Dreadful."

Big Dog Funnies (Rip Off) "Creator D.M. Pitts' 'jokes' are on a level with those found on Garfield mugs. He'd probably be appalled at the comparison. Good."

Hell Rider (Skywald) "A dreadful magazine attempting to attract the audiences flocking to see the lame biker movies made in the wake of Easy Rider's success."

Psychoanalysis (E.C.) "Jack Kamen makes a sterling attempt at injecting excitement and variety into a dry topic requiring plenty of talking-heads shots, but can only cope with so many of them no matter how good he is."

Plowright has pulled together a team of reviewers (or collated a batch of reviews) which lead the reader enticingly from entry to entry, reminding him or her to check out a title, reread an old favorite, or look for recommended issues from an ongoing series. $30 is steep, but you'll be going to this volume again and again, checking out backstory, quibbling with opinions, and (if you're a professional) going for that egoscan name search. If you're a regular reader of Comics Guide, you're in the target audience for this volume. A minor problem is that there are no interior pictures, but the primary problem lies with any volume (including such compendia as Leonard Maltin's movie books) that prints the opinions of a variety of judges: There's no solid core based on a single aggregation of standards from which to gather which evaluators glory in smart-aleck remarks over pointing out merits. (Though at least these writers sign their opinions.)

If you're an obsessive over one or two characters or creators, you don't need this volume. If you're at all serious about locating a variety of material you'll enjoy, you should have this book. (Retailers will find it an invaluable reference, too. A copy at the desk for customers to browse through could quickly lead to sales of a bunch of new titles — worth taking a chance on the investment.) It will be available in the direct market via Diamond shortly.

"In those wretched countries where a man cannot call his tongue his own, he can scarce call anything his own. Whoever would overthrow the liberty of a nation must begin by subduing the freeness of speech; a thing terrible to publick traitors."

— Benjamin Franklin (1706-1790)

My kids and I visit the Medina County District Library roughly every other week or so. We usually come out of there with a large stack of books, CDs, and video tapes. On one of our recent visits, I also picked up the fliers and pamphlets made available by the library.

There was a library card application form that included a note to parents explaining the library's policies and allowing those parents who wished to restrict their child's borrowing privileges to do so. If a parent wanted information about materials borrowed by his or her child, the library had several suggestions. These included: visiting the library with the child and choosing materials together; having a special shelf or basket in one's home for storage of all library material; and checking a child's holdings on a Public Access Computer in the library. Although patron records are confidential, parents can access the information, if they have their child's card or card number.

A flier titled "A Child's Pledge for Online Safety" instructed young library patrons on common-sense guidelines for safe use of the Internet. It recommended that parents and children set up rules for going online.

There were pamphlets on the library's Internet use guidelines, kids and libraries, and library resources policy. All stressed the concept of personal responsibility, whether it be on the part of a computer user or a parent.

Finally, there was an issue of the library's newsletter. The newsletter described the changes the library's Board of Trustees had made in response to community suggestions and, to help patrons better understand and use the library's computer facilities, gave the schedule of the 50 technology classes being offered by the library in September and October.

I think any reasonable person would conclude that the library was providing outstanding service to its patrons, as well as taking responsible precautions to protect its younger patrons from viewing inappropriate material. The latter is an especially thankless task, because, while the library must consider the First Amendment when setting its policies, there are those in our community who would gleefully gut the Constitution in the pursuit of their extreme right-wing political and religious agendas.

July saw the usual letters to the editors from the usual suspects. Deborah Malenock, chairperson of the Medina County Christian Coalition, and Julie Wotjala, cofounder and executive secretary of Citizens for the Protection of Children, repeated the falsehood that the Library was in violation of the Ohio Revised Code provisions concerning obscenity.

In another letter, Wotjala tried to position as a victory the CPC's failure to get the Ohio state legislature to mandate the restrictions her organization was demanding. Had she visited our library, I'm certain one of the helpful staff members there would have led her to a dictionary and pointed out the difference between "mandatory" and "voluntary."

Some new voices were heard, as well. John J. Myers of Medina took the standard shots at the American Library Association and then called for his fellow citizens to vote down the library levy that will account for 43% of the library's operating budget for the next 10 years.

Darrell Haumesser, also of Medina, wrote: There needs to be some type of appropriate measures taken to see that this type of (inappropriate) material doesn't end up in the hands of our kids!

Like Malenock and Wotjala, Haumesser ignored the radical concept of parents actually being responsible for their own kids.

August saw the tide of this "war of the words" turn in favor of the library. In the Aug. 3 edition of the Akron Beacon-Journal, Will Franz challenged Wotjala's frequent claim that the CPC had no religious agenda. He wrote:

She claims her group has no religious agenda, but aligns it with others, such as Citizens for Excellence in Education, the Eagle Forum, and Focus on the Family, which are merely fronts for the stealth politics of the Christian Coalition and its brand of Christian revisionism. I also found her call for citizens to vote no whenever a library levy appears on the ballot mindless and menacing.

In the Aug. 4 Medina County Gazette, C.B. McClure of Medina had this to say in support of the levy:

Libraries are not charged with the care, maintenance, or support of minor children. Parents are. If parents are indifferent to their obligation to teach their kids what they want them to see or read, or don't take the time to go to the library and sign a waiver to let the children see or read whatever is in stock, then the problem is reduced to this: Whether to close the library in deference to a few and punish a majority, or leave the library open to all and take the consequences.

One of the more interesting letters came from Rev. Michael D. Oakley of Liverpool Township. In the Aug. 14 Gazette, Rev. Oakley wrote to express his dismay over a poster and flier displayed and distributed by the Christian Coalition at the recent Medina County Fair. These Coalition materials personally attacked Bob Smith, the director of the Medina County District Library, a frequent target for the Coalition's typical demonizing of those who oppose its demands.

Oakley wrote: While I do not necessarily agree with all of Smith's positions, this one Christian individual deplores the Christian Coalition's personal attack on him. I am especially concerned because the Christian Coalition purports to represent Christians and Christian values. The Christian Coalition does not represent me. And especially in this innuendo-filled personal attack, it does not represent my Christian values.

Malenock responded to the letter in the Sept. 4 Gazette.

She started out by claiming the Coalition was a "citizen action organization" and not intended to be neutral on pro-family and pro-life issues. But, by the end of the letter, in which she defended the attacks on Smith, she was dropping God's name in support of the organization's position.

I'm reminded of the old Saturday Night Live routine in which a product was touted as both a floor wax and a dessert topping. It's the way of the Coalition to portray itself as either a religious organization or a political organization depending on its needs of the moment. It's a chameleon with fangs.

Public support of the library continued. In the Aug. 25 Gazette, Mary Gresock of Medina reminded parents of "the wonderful story-time programs available for children" at the library and the inventive ways in which the staff helped children "develop a love for books that creatively channels their imagination, increases their attention span, and promotes their desire to be readers themselves."

On September 4, an Akron Beacon-Journal editorial endorsed the library levy. It said:

In their own version of "my way or the highway," some parents in Medina County are willing to shut down the library for everyone. How else to interpret a full-fledged campaign to defeat the library's upcoming levy, from which it draws nearly half its operating income? That's a drastic solution.

Libraries have a tough job in today's high-tech age, and they aren't likely to please everyone all the time. However, the campaign to defeat the library levy is misguided. If it succeeds, the people in Medina who simply want a decent library system will be the losers.

Educator Jim Gilder of Spencer, writing in the Sept. 15 Gazette, called the library "the best bargain in town" and told of his students using its resources to complete their assignments, often at the last minute — kids — because they were able to gather information on the Internet. He praised the many educational and entertainment services provided by the library, and urged citizens to vote in favor of the library levy.

After nearly a year of often contentious debate and outright misinformation, it comes down to the money.

Director Smith says: The issue is values. Just because we didn't do what [CPC] wanted us to do, they want to threaten the services we provide to everyone else in Medina County.

Michelle Yezerski, founder of CPC, says: Because they have chosen to ignore us, we have no other choice. They are working for us; it is not the other way around. And if they don't want to listen, we'll take away their money until they listen to us. If you do not listen to the community's wishes, we will shut you down.

If the library levy fails to pass, there will be drastic cuts in the services currently provided. The cuts suggested by the staff include eliminating popular but staffing-intensive programs like the summer reading program, borrowing materials from other libraries, and serving area schools. The library staff itself would have to be reduced.

Hours of operation would be cut by 35% to 75%. Sunday hours would be eliminated. The district's two biggest libraries would only be open two nights a week. Three other libraries would have limited operating hours three days a week.

There would be "major purchasing cuts in popular fiction," and these cuts would include books, videos, audios, magazines, and paperbacks. Public meeting rooms would be closed. Tax forms would no longer be available at the branches. Maintenance and building repair would be reduced.

Ironically, Internet access and availability, the monster most often conjured up by the Christian Coalition and its allies, would not be cut. "The Internet is not going away," said Deborah Pawlik, manager of collection resources at the district library. "We've spent the year fighting for intellectual freedom."

Additionally, the Internet is among the cheapest services the library offers, since the equipment is paid for. However, due to the expected staff cuts if the levy should fail, there would be fewer librarians available to guide patrons through the wonders and the dangers of the World Wide Web and to address the matter of patrons who violate the library's current guidelines.

Over the past weeks, many of you have e-mailed or written me asking if there was something you could do to help the library in its battle with the forces of repression. Many of you recognize that what happens in Medina could well be a test case for libraries throughout our country.

There are two things you can do.

You can send a donation to the Citizens for the Library. Any amount will help, because we're fighting a campaign backed by the national resources of the Christian Coalition. Make your donation payable to Citizens for the Library and mail it to:

Citizens for the Library
c/o Ron Ritz
210 South Broadway
Medina, OH 44256

You can also join me and other library supporters Saturday, Oct. 11, from 11 a.m. to noon, on Medina's Public Square. I'll be running a "cartoonists booth" where area artists will do sketches, help kids draw, and talk about the benefits they've derived from the library.

At noon, in what for some of us will be a '60s flashback, we will join hands, circle the square, and reach out to the Medina library across the street from the square. But I'm warning you, I'm going for the throat of the first joker who starts singing "Kum ba Yah." There are limits.

As you can tell, this whole situation has made me more than a bit tense. Of course, what scares me is that I'm starting to like it. Solidarity, my brothers and sisters in the struggle.

Thanks for your interest and for your support.

Tony Isabella will be writing about comic books next week and loving it. You can send him comments and review stuff at: Tony's Tips, P.O. Box 1502, Medina, OH 44258.

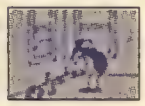
Presenting 'The Acme Novelty Library'

Being a transcribed account of a dynamic, varied, and highly unusual interchange conducted by Andrea Juno in a conversation covering the career and inventive devices of creator Chris Ware

"I've tried to avoid all genres. I don't understand why more people don't do this."
~ Chris Ware



Notice of copyright: Please note that all rendered material on these three pages concerning and otherwise relating to the Acme Novelty Library, while published by Fantagraphics Books of Seattle, Wash., and packaged by the Acme Novelty Company, is copyright 1997 by Chris Ware.

[Editor's note: The following interview — edited for CBG's style — was conducted by Andrea Juno for the book Dangerous Drawings, recently published by Juno Books.]

Chris Ware has created stylistically unique and intellectually stimulating contemporary work drawing comics under the name The Acme Novelty Library. He has forged his own singular signature on the formal and contextual territory of the medium. Ware was born in 1967, raised in Nebraska, and got his start in comics while attending the University of Texas in Austin. In 1987, Art Spiegelman invited him to contribute to Raw magazine. He moved to Chicago in 1991 and continued to draw his peculiar comics for the alternative weekly paper New City, where he is still a regular contributor. He graduated from the School of the Art Institute of Chicago with a degree in printmaking.

Fantagraphics has published nine issues of his series in a variety of formats, ranging from a digest-sized black and white edition to a full-color 11x18" version. These include "Quimby the Mouse," "Sparky's Best Comics and Stories," "The Acme Book of Jokes," and five issues featuring "Jimmy Corrigan, the Smartest Kid on Earth."

In addition to art, Ware uses written material extensively. This includes satirical articles from the "newsletter" of the fictitious Acme Novelty Library, letters from his readers with his replies, and mock advertisements. Much of the text is set in barely readable type. Even his humblest of copyright notices is written in a meticulously crafted style reminiscent of popular turn-of-the-century catalogs and magazines. Suggestive of a comforting antique innocence, upon further examination they reveal caustic, subversive parodies that are hysterically funny. His meticulous hand-lettering and graphic design have given him additional acclaim. He also handcrafts such objects as the Acme Book Dispenser, a wooden vending machine that releases tiny comic books in exchange for house keys; Quimbies the Dancing Mouse, a two-headed mechanized mouse contraption; and Sparky the Singing Cat, a box powered by a crank handle in which a stitched black cat face contorts as it sings goodbye to its grandmother.

Ware has received critical praise from the popular press to the art world. The comics industry has presented him with 14 Harvey and Eisner Awards between 1995 and 1997. He has illustrated several book, magazine, and CD covers, but spends most of his time and energy on The Acme Novelty Library.

CBG: You hold such a rare spot in the world of cartooning because you've created your own form. Why did you do this?

Chris Ware: I've tried to avoid all genres. I don't understand why more people don't do this. Instead, they seem to want to "fit" their work into a certain genre, like detective fiction, fantasy, or romance. Doing that, it seems to me, immediately limits the possibility for creating a real sense of life.

CBG: Were comics at all important to you as a child?

Ware: I didn't really like reading comics. I just liked looking at them and fantasizing about being big and muscular and acquiring super-powers, running around with women dressed in tights. When Batman became a TV show, it was the ultimate thrill for me to be able to see it in real time. I took it deadly seriously. I didn't have any idea it was a satire. I really preferred watching it on television and dressing up and all that hoohaw. That's all embarrassing stuff.

CBG: You work in an unglamorized field, a field which is almost despised as childish by many people who consider themselves literate and "cutting-edge." What would happen if you were at a party and said, "I'm a cartoonist?"

Ware: A wide circle of emptiness would grow around me: "Don't talk to that guy."

If you compare cartooning to a lot of art that's being done now, it does seem as though it's the most warm, direct, old-fashioned sort of craft being done. One of my complaints against the use of computers in typography or design is that it looks as if the artist is just working within the boundaries set up by the computer program. Of course, I fall into this trap just as easily as anyone. They've followed those boundaries and haven't made any attempt to change them.

CBG: Your comics are wonderfully jarring — like getting visual and textual whiplash. In one panel you can have the most heart-wrenching emotional scene, then in the next encounter a complete reversal with emotional distance. Do you consider your work emotional?

Ware: I desperately try to put as much real emotion in it as I possibly can. But even cartoonists I really admire have been quoted as saying they find my work dry and laborious. I think they're looking at it as art, rather than reading it as a comic strip.

To me, it comes down to the problem, or advantage, of comics. They're defined as separate from writing or visual art because they're simultaneously read and viewed. If readers "view" it rather than "read" it, they're going to pay more attention to how it's drawn. (It's a common mistake to assume because work is messy or loose, it's therefore more expressive, human, and warm.)

There seems to be a new generation of cartoonists creating a more "mature" form of literature. At least, that's what I'm trying to create. Other than motion pictures and Wagnerian opera, comics use more elements of art than any other form. You have to know how to draw, you have to know how to write, you have to have, for lack of a better word, a musical or poetic sense, because of comics' internal, almost poetic, rhythm. You have to have an awareness of gesture, almost in a dance-like way.

I could be grasping at straws here, but it just seems to me that it requires a lot from anyone trying to do it. And, as a result, it doesn't seem like a terribly attractive thing to attempt, unless you're a megalomaniac like myself.

CBG: We all know what fiction can do, we all know what a painting can do. The best comics create a third level, more than the sum of their parts.

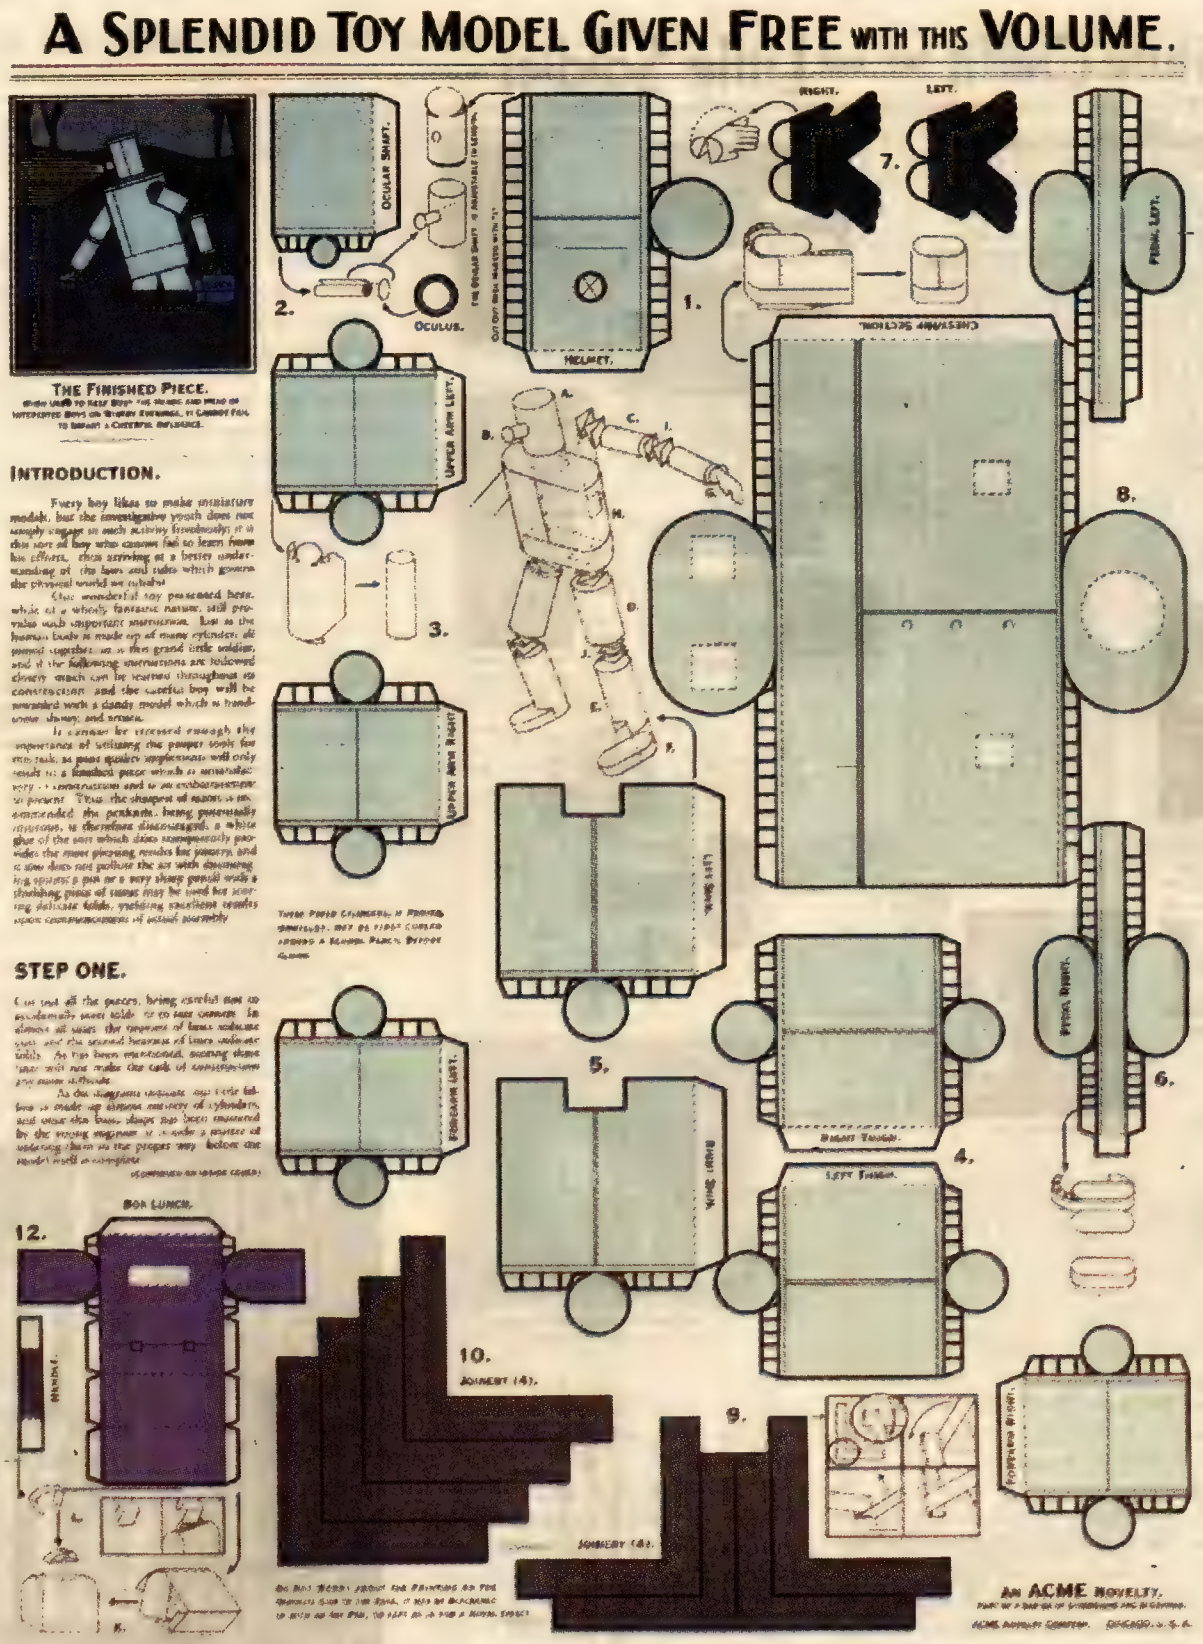
Ware: It's not in any way a passive medium. The material is inert unless you're regarding it. A film can be a very potent, emotional, thought-provoking experience, or you can also just sit there with your mouth open and watch cars explode if you want



For the greatest pleasure in consumption of this fine informational piece, the editors recommend: (1) purchase of multiple copies of this fine reading material, (2) adhesion of its pages to firm backing material, (3) taking diligent care, excision of the appropriate illustrative portions, and (4) construction of a magnificent finished product.

the Independent SHELF

An occasional guide to all things independent!

"Winner of the Week: Men in Black. With its $385 million worldwide box-office take (as of Sept. 4), the sci-fi smash became the highest grossing movie in Columbia Pictures' history.
"Loser of the Week: Men in Black*. The Internet is buzzing with news that recent newspaper ads for the film contain the subliminal image of a male organ in the creases of Tommy Lee Jones' jacket."*
— Sept. 9 Entertainment Weekly

Missing dog creates problems for Men in Black card set

Card #87 of Inkworks' Men in Black card set was supposed to feature Frank the Pug, an alien in dog disguise well-known to fans of the film. Shortly before the set's initial print run, however, it was discovered that the dog's image was missing from the card. The erroneous card was hastily reprinted with the corrected image and collated with the rest of the series just before its scheduled June 25 release.

Word quickly filtered back to Inkworks, however, that the erroneous Pugless card had persisted into some of the released packs.

Inkworks President Allan Caplan said, "We want to be fair to the collector. If they get a Pugless card, they can forward it to us, and we will replace it immediately. Ironically, as is often seen in this industry, those rare Pugless cards will probably become more valuable over time. But we'll leave it up to the collector to decide whether he wants to keep the card or not."

To receive a replacement card, possessors of the erroneous card can send it, along with a SASE, to: P.O. Box 61099, Raleigh, NC 27661.

The 90-card Men in Black series features a tour of the MiB headquarters, a guide to the MiB galaxy, character profiles, and three levels of chase cards, including five Alien Profile die-cut cards, five Secrets of MiB cards printed on prismatic foil, and two Cards in Black, one with Will Smith and the other depicting Tommy Lee Jones.

The eight-card MiB packs sell for a suggested retail price of $1.79. Inkworks said a collector album designed to hold the entire series will also be available.

Gary Numan records album inspired by Linsner's 'Dawn'

Techno pioneer Gary Numan has composed and performed 10 tracks of music inspired by Joseph Michael Linsner's Dawn comic book. The resulting compact disc, Dawn, is being offered exclusively through the direct market for a limited time.

Numan is a British musician known primarily for his early work in the late '70s with the Tubeway Army and his successful solo single in America, "Cars."

Scheduled to ship from Sirius Comics in November, the CD package includes eight new Dawn paintings by Linsner. The package carries a suggested retail price of $16.95.

Alternative spotlight on: Malicious Resplendence: The Paintings of Robert Williams

Robert Williams is one of the founding creators of Zap Comics, and this 300-page hardcover collection spans his career from his roots in the custom-car culture of Southern Californ to his recent surreal paintings.

His swirling, hallucinogenic collages and sequences are part of the iconography of the counterculture. Originally seen in lowly pulp formats and considered controversial for its explicitness and drug connotations, his work has now achieved coffee-table status with this color hardcover volume.

Priced at $79.95 ($99.95 in Canada), the book is also available in a numbered limited edition with a gold-stamped slipcase and a sewn-in tip-in sheet signed by Williams. The limited edition is priced at $125.95 ($165.95 in Canada).

the toy box

San Diego con: a range of toy alternatives. This year, Comic-Con International — San Diego introduced fans to Milk and Cheese magnet sets based on Evan Dorkin's well-known duo and a host of action figures no longer catering just to kids and mass-market vendors like Toys 'R' Us. The toy market has turned toward comic-book and specialty stores with exclusive products that are based on more than just mainstream comics super-heroes.

• Direct-market action-figure exclusives arriving soon include a Nira X figure based on the Entity Comics character; Pandora originating from Avatar Press; a set of four PVCs based on Trent Kaniuga's tough tyke, Creed, from the title of the same name published by Lightning Comics; and an action figure of Sinthia, also star of a title published by Lightning Comics. All of these figures are arriving from Skybolt Toyz a new small toy company known for its Helina direct-market action figure. Skybolt Toyz has also recently announced a nonexclusive deal to produce action figures based on the Valiant Heroes line of comics from Acclaim Comics. The first characters to be released will be X-O Manowar in June 1998 and Solar, Man of the Atom in July 1998. After an initial appearance in their current costumes, versions with other costume variations are planned for 1999.

Lady Death action figure

• A line of action figures from the Chaos Comics! universe sculpted and released from the newly formed Moore Action Collectibles will feature the comics characters Evil Ernie, Lady Death, Purgatori, and Lady Demon. Moore has also announced a deal with Top Cow Studios to produce a line of direct-market figures based on its ultra hot Witchblade series.

• Rob Liefeld's Awesome Entertaiment has just released a comics-store-exclusive seven-inch action figure of the company's Prophet character and has already begun advertising a figure based on Liefeld's Shaft character from Youngblood.

• Custom-made figures based on Art Baltazar's Cray Baby Adventures (a cartoonesque world that might be described as The Smurfs meet Bone) will be offered as a retailer incentive in conjunction with Cray Baby Adventures #2 (the first Destination Entertainment-published issue) available only through comic-book distributors in October catalogues.

• Retro TV shows and movies are in, and new toys will be coming to comic book stores and major toy and retail chains beginning this holiday season. The newly formed Exclusive Toy Products will offer nine-inch dolls based on shows like Happy Days (Richie, Potsie, and the Fonz), Gilligan's Island (Gilligan, Skipper, and the Professor), The Dukes of Hazzard (Bo, Luke, and Daisy Duke), The Honeymooners (Ralph, Alice, and Ed Norton), and Bewitched (Samantha). Movie properties like It's a Wonderful Life (George Bailey, Mary Bailey, and Clarence) and the Blues Brothers (Jake and Elwood) will also have limited edition dolls based on them.

• Licensed properties jumping from the screen to comics to the toy shelves include Jackie Chan's Spartan X (Topps Comics) with a direct-market-only action figure from Palisades Toys, The Munsters (TV Comics!) with a set of collector dolls available in 1998 from Exclusive Toy Products (characters unavailable at press time but you can bet Herman and Grandpa will be two of the set), and Babylon 5 (DC) also from ETP with exclusive nine-inch dolls and six-inch action figures available late this year and into 1998, including three dolls available exclusively through Diamond's Previews. — Marc Patten

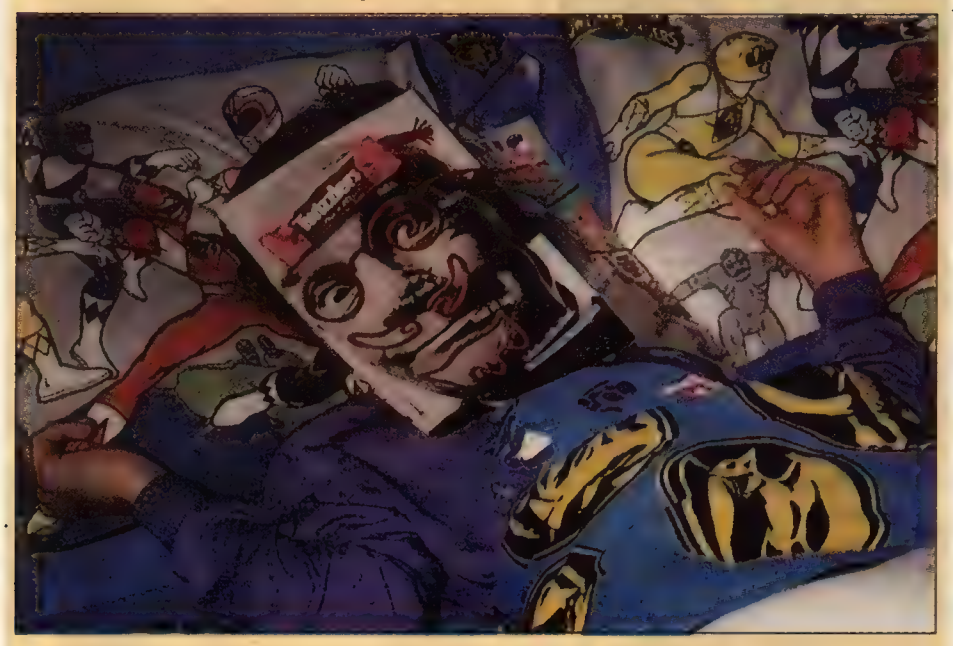
'Oh, So?' Extra



Kenneth A. Kropf

Pittsburgh, PA 15214

This is a picture of my son Christopher that I snapped at about 2 a.m..

Lights out are at 10 or 10:30 p.m., but he often turns them back on to read the latest Sonic or Superman comics. He is 10 years old.

I thought the back cover of this particular comic book was well-placed on that night and thought I'd pass it along for a chuckle.

I have been working/managing Eide's Entertainment in Pittsburgh for more than 18 years. We just celebrated our 25th anniversary this past spring.

[BWF: Congratulations on your store's anniversary. CBG Ad Representative John Diser and I were in Pittsburgh for the Pittsburgh Comicon this past spring and enjoyed visiting the store.]

'Puppet Master' puppets become action figures

Andre Toulon's toys from the Puppet Master film series are being released as action figures by Full Moon Toys, a division of film producer Full Moon Studios. Based on the figures that terrorize and kill characters in the films, the first two releases, Blade and Six-Shooter, are scheduled to ship by Halloween.

Full Moon Executive Vice President Rick Phares said, "We've been receiving countless letters and phone calls asking us to make action figures of our movie characters. We carefully examined all of the different possible scenarios and decided to form our own company to manufacture these figures. We have spent a great amount of time and effort to create our characters and wanted to have a more 'hands-on' involvement.

"Each figure stands almost seven inches tall and comes with authentic details such as a real cloth overcoat and hair for Blade and a miniature bandana for Six-Shooter. Blade's eyes even light up, just like in the movies. As a special bonus, we are including a special variant of each figure, available only in full cases (at a rate of one variant per four standard figures). These variants will feature gold weapons, as well as some other extras."

Additional variants have been made for Kentucky-based Troll and Toad. The Troll and Toad variant edition of Blade will have bullets substituting for his eyes and a dark gray hat and coat instead of the standard black ones. Troll and Toad's Six-Shooter has a brown hat, black holsters, brown trousers, and a blue bandana.

Mail-order dealer Hanger 18 is offering a "Blood Splattered Blade" with blood-colored red paint on his right hand and the rest of his body. The figure also features a chromed face.

"After numerous requests, we finally decided to make these variants for these companies," Phares said. "We were really concerned about making variants that were significantly different from the 'standard' editions. We also wanted to limit the number of exclusive variants so that collectors don't have to search too hard to complete their sets."

Phares added that the line will be primarily marketed to comics, collectibles, and action-figure retailers as well as video outlets. Two more figures are scheduled for release by the end of the year with two more to follow in the spring of 1998.

"Since making the announcement that we're doing these figures, we've gotten countless calls from our fans asking for particular characters," Phares said. "And they've been asking us for all of the various puppets as well as other Full Moon movie characters. We definitely plan on expanding this line!"

The initial figures retail for $13.95 each.

Asterix the Gaul invades Montreal museum

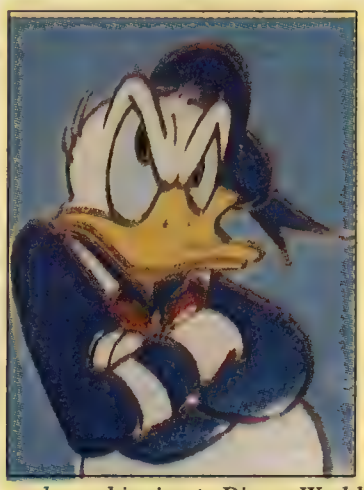
Asterix, Obelix, and their friends and foes have traveled from their native Gaul to be part of "Asterix, the Exhibition" at the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts through Nov. 16.

More than 300 exhibits, including previously unseen drawings by Asterix co-creator Albert Uderzo as well as his drawing board and co-creator René Goscinny's typewriter, make up the show.

Models of the characters and their village in Gaul are complemented by real Gallo-Roman stone and bronze sculptures, folk art, and items used by the Gauls — including a scythe used by druids (like Asterix character Getafix) to cut mistletoe, a lyre played by bards (like Cacofonix), and Roman helmets. While many of the historical items on display come from the museum's permanent collection, a number of objects have been loaned to the exhibit from a dozen museums in France, including the Musée national des Arts et Traditions Populaires in Paris and various Canadian museums.

Created in 1959, Asterix recounted the exploits of a band of Gauls around 50 B.C. and their interactions over the years with an invading Roman legion, the Olympics in Greece, Cleopatra's Egypt, and North America's Amerindian civilization. The museum exhibits not only show how a comic strip is created, but also expose visitors to daily life in a village in Gaul. Uderzo said the exhibition "links the story of our hero in Gaul to the world history that is our timeless heritage."

Museum hours are Tuesday through Sunday 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. with extended hours on Wednesdays until 9



The "Tantrum Tile," (left) a companion piece to the "Tantrum on the Way" bronze bust released earlier this year by the Carl Barks Studio, is available exclusively at Walt Disney World. The tile, which retails for $495, was introduced at The Main Street Gallery, a new animation gallery that opened at the Magic Kingdom in early September.

According to Barks Studio Managers Bill Grandey and Kathy Morby, the "Tantrum Tile" is also a companion piece to the "50 Stingy Years" tile featuring Scrooge McDuck which was released during Barks' 96th birthday event at Disney World earlier this year. That tile "sold out in about two hours," Grandey said, adding that both tiles have matching blue backgrounds and "fit well in sunny or heavily lighted areas of the home."

One hundred copies of "Tantrum" will be released and are shipping to Disney World in lots of 25. Grandey said that the first 50 tiles have already sold out and the remaining two shipments are scheduled for late September and late October. The Main Street Gallery can be reached at (407) 824-6622.

New comics scheduled to ship in October

These are comics scheduled to ship during the month of October that, to the best of our knowledge, have not yet had specific release dates announced. Crossed-out titles have been reported as shipped. Be aware that comics can take two or three days to reach retailers once they are shipped, so comics that are shipped at the end of the month may not appear in your local store until early the following month.

TRADERS

Trader ads are available for $40.00 each. Traders are designed by the advertiser on 8-1/2" x 8-1/2" paper. We reduce the ad to 3-1/4" x 3-1/4" size. Trader ads are a low cost form of advertising. Because of this, CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or credit card symbols to Trader ads.

Trader Tips

The Trader ads in CBG are an easy and economical way to advertise. Simply design your ad in a space that is 8½" wide by 8½" high and send it along with payment ($40.00 per Trader space) and complete reference form to:

COMICS BUYER'S GUIDE
Advertising Department
700 E. State Street
Iola, WI 54990-0001

We'll reduce your ad to the proper size and place it in the issue(s) you request. If no specific issue(s) is requested, we'll run your ad in the next available issue.

Keep in mind that CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or symbols to Trader ads. The better your ad looks when you send it to us, the better it will look when it is reduced and published in CBG.

TRADERS

Trader ads are available for $40.00 each. Traders are designed by the advertiser on 8-1/2" x 8-1/2" paper. We reduce the ad to 3-1/4" x 3-1/4" size. Trader ads are a low cost form of advertising. Because of this, CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or credit card symbols to Trader ads.

The advertisers' index is provided as a reader service. Occasional last minute changes may result in ads appearing on pages other than those listed here. The publisher assumes no liability for omissions or errors.

GENERAL INFORMATION

A. PAYMENT: Ads must be accompanied by payment. You may pay with a check, money order, or credit card.

B. CREDIT CARDS: We will accept the following credit cards: VISA, MasterCard, American Express, Discover.

C. DEADLINE: For all advertising is 4:00 p.m. each Tuesday, unless otherwise stated on deadline card.

D. TERMS: Cash with copy only. All advertisers must provide information for the confidential use of the publisher should questions arise.

E. CONTRACT RATES are available for 6, 13, 26, or 52 consecutive issues. Contract rates apply to fulfillment of contract items. Cancellation of a contract by the advertiser allows the publisher to reinvoice covered ads at the earned rate. This rate card is a part of the advertising contract.

F. MINORS are required to furnish a statement of responsibility from their parent or guardian before their advertising can be accepted.

G. ERRORS: Typewritten copy is recommended. The publisher is not responsible for errors resulting from long-hand or illegible copy, or changes submitted by telephone. The publisher's liability for any error shall not exceed the cost of the space occupied by that error.

H. LAYOUT and design services are provided by Krause Publications for advertisers who do not submit camera-ready copy. Due to the creative and subjective nature of these services, credit will not be allowed for conceptual variations.

I. GRADING: Items offered in any ad must be properly described as to condition, conforming to the standards set forth in Comics Buyer's Guide Price Guide. Advertisers may also exercise the option of grading offerings by applying a unique personal system, providing the standards applied are detailed in the ad to avoid confusion.

J. RETURN PRIVILEGE: Except as otherwise specified in any ad, an advertiser must accept the return of any merchandise postmarked within ten working days of its receipt by a customer.

K. P.O. BOX ADS are allowed, but the permanent home address, phone number and place of business of the advertiser must be filed with the publisher before advertisements may be printed.

L. SPECIAL PAGE POSITIONS are available at a premium, inquire for details.

M. ADVERTISING AGENCIES: There are no agency discounts.

N. CAMERA READY display ads qualify for a 15% discount. Copy must be ready for camera without additional paste-up or film work required. No charge for reproductions, enlargements or mail response key change. Classified Display, Comics Trader, Collector's Showcase and classified word ads do not qualify for the camera ready discount.

O. SPACE RESERVATIONS available for camera ready ads only. Must be made prior to ad deadline. Reserved space must be paid for even if ad does not arrive on time.

P. PRE-PRINTED INSERTS are available in Comics Buyer's Guide. Inquire for additional information and technical specifications.

Q. CIRCULATION is throughout the United States and Canada by subscription and single copy sales by agents in shops and other outlets.

R. PROOF OF PUBLICATION: Tear sheets of new display ads are mailed to those advertisers requesting this service. We regret we cannot provide this service to classified advertisers.

S. NOTE: All advertising orders are accepted subject to the terms and provisions of the current rate card. Krause Publications, Inc. reserves the right to decline advertising or suspend advertising privileges for such periods of time as in its discretion it sees fit, for any reason, whatsoever, irrespective of the validity of the reasons for such declination or suspension. The forwarding of an order is construed as acceptance of all rates and conditions in effect at the time the advertising is submitted. The publisher will not be bound by any conditions, printed or otherwise, appearing on any order for advertising space, billing instructions or copy instructions which conflict with its policies. Once again I find myself under the deadline gun. I guess the worst thing you can do for a writer is hire him, thus leaving him all sorts of cause for complaint. Which is particularly upsetting, because I wanted to talk about the settling of the Planet Comics case. But that'll have to wait until next week, and I'll have to push back the new relettered Fighting American another week, as well. So here, once again, is humor from the computer barrel drawn from the apparently endless gags that folks keep sending me.

"I guess the worst thing you can do for a writer is hire him."
— Peter David

From Chris Coleman comes the tale of:

The new priest

A new priest at his first mass was so nervous he could hardly speak. After mass he asked the monsignor how he had done. The monsignor replied, "When I am worried about getting nervous on the pulpit, I put a glass of vodka next to the water glass. If I start to get nervous, I take a sip." So the next Sunday he took the monsignor's advice. At the beginning of the sermon, he got nervous and took a drink. He proceeded to talk up a storm. Upon return to his office after mass, he found the following note on his door:

- Sip the vodka, don't gulp.
- There are 10 Commandments, not 12.
- There are 12 disciples, not 10.
- Jesus was consecrated, not constipated.
- We do not refer to Jesus Christ as the late J.C.
- The Father, Son, and Holy Ghost are not referred to as Pop, Junior, and the Spook.
- David slew Goliath, he did not kick the hell out of him.
- We do not refer to the cross as the Big T.
- The recommended grace before a meal is not: "Rub-a-dub-dub, thanks for the grub, yeah, God!"

Anna Maginnis speculates:

What if Dr. Seuss did technical writing?

If a packet hits a pocket on a socket on a port, and the bus is interrupted as a very last resort, and the address of the memory makes your floppy disk abort, then the socket packet pocket has an error to report.

If your cursor finds a menu item followed by a dash, and the double-clicking icon puts your window in the trash, and your data is corrupted 'cause the index doesn't hash, then your situation's hopeless and your system's gonna crash!

If the label on the cable on the table at your house, says the network is connected to the button on your mouse, but your packets want to tunnel on another protocol that's repeatedly rejected by the printer down the hall, and your screen is all distorted by the side effects of gauss, so your icons in the window are as wavy as a souse, then you may as well reboot and go out with a bang, 'cause as sure as I'm a poet, the sucker's gonna hang!

When the copy of your floppy's getting sloppy on the disk and the microcode instructions cause unnecessary risk, then you have to flash your memory and you'll want to RAM your ROM. Quickly turn off the computer and be sure to tell your mom.

And finally, for you pet lovers out there, Anna also gives us the following tale (tail?):

A lady awoke one morning and discovered her dog was not moving. She called her vet, who asked her to bring the dog in. After a brief examination, the vet pronounced the dog dead.

"Are you sure?" the distraught woman asked. "He was a great family pet. Isn't there anything else you can do?"

The vet paused for a moment and said, "There is one more thing we can do." He left the room for a moment and came back carrying a large cage with a cat in it. The vet opened the cage door and the cat walked over to the dog. The cat sniffed the dog from head to toe and walked back to the cage.

"Well, that confirms it." the vet announced. "Your dog is dead."

Satisfied that the vet had done everything he possibly could, the woman sighed, "How much do I owe you?"

"That will be $330." the vet replied.

"I don't believe it!" screamed the woman. "What did you do that cost $330?"

"Well," the vet replied, "it's $30 for the office visit and $300 for the cat scan."
